Introduction

Competence and Flexibility...

...they are vital skills that employers seek in new hires. Today more than ever, businesses need people with a demonstrated ability to adapt to different situations and circumstances. And perhaps more than any other group, people with disabilities possess precisely these attributes. On a daily basis, people with disabilities must think creatively about how to solve problems and accomplish tasks. In the workplace, this resourcefulness translates into innovative thinking, fresh ideas and varied approaches to confronting business challenges and achieving success.

While research shows that people with disabilities make excellent employees, not all employers know how to effectively recruit, hire and retain such individuals. That’s where this booklet comes in. It’s a quick reference guide outlining the advantages of hiring people with disabilities, along with four simple steps to increasing the inclusiveness of your workforce. With numerous resources and Web links, the following pages are a helpful starting point for organizations looking to benefit from the talents of qualified individuals with disabilities.

This tool was developed by the U.S. Department of Labor’s Office of Disability Employment Policy (ODEP). For free consulting services and resources to support the recruitment and hiring of people with disabilities, contact Employer Assistance and Resource Network (EARN) at 866-EARN-NOW (866-327-6669) (Voice/TTY) or www.earnworks.com. For free, confidential guidance on workplace accommodations, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and related legislation, contact the Job Accommodation Network (JAN) at 800-526-7234 (Voice), 877-781-9403 (TTY) or AskJAN.org. To learn more about DOL’s efforts to increase employment opportunities for people with disabilities, visit the ODEP Web site at www.dol.gov/odep.
Access the resources below to learn why hiring employees with disabilities makes good business sense.

Return on Investment. Employing people with disabilities boosts your bottom line.

The first step in tapping this labor pool is effective recruitment. The following are practical resources to help with the process.

Be Proactive. Expand your outreach to target qualified candidates who will expand your talent pool. Visit the USBLN web site at www.usbln.org for ideas and resources.

Ensure Access. For personalized guidance on making your recruitment activities totally accessible, contact the Job Accommodation Network, a free, confidential service for employers and others, at AskJAN.org.

Build Tomorrow’s Talent Pipeline. Mentoring activities and internships targeting youth and college students with disabilities can help you cultivate talent for the future.

The successful employment of people with disabilities requires accessible hiring processes and an understanding of the legal environment in which hiring takes place. The following resources can help.

General Guidance. As always, the goal of the interviewing and hiring process is to identify individuals who have the best mix of skills and attributes for a particular job. For more information on how to ensure that all qualified individuals can participate in this process, review Opening Doors to All Candidates: Tips for Ensuring Access for Applicants with Disabilities at www.dol.gov/odep/pubs/fact/opening.htm.

Job Advertisements & Applications. For wording tips and samples of accessible online applications, check the following resources:

- Employers’ Practical Guide to Reasonable Accommodations for Job Advertisements and Applications AskJAN.org/Erguide/Two.htm
- Making the Online Application Process Accessible AskJAN.org/corner/vol02iss05.htm
- Tips for Designing Accessible Web Pages AskJAN.org/media/webpages.html

Interviews. To be qualified job candidates, individuals with disabilities—like all other applicants—must have the necessary qualifications for the job (i.e., education, training, experience, skills, and/or licenses) and be able to perform the essential functions or duties of the job. When interviewing candidates, keep in mind this basic rule: Ask applicants about their abilities, not their disabilities.

Once an employee with a disability is a part of the team, there are many resources available to help employers ensure workplace productivity, health, and safety.

Effective Communication. Employers and co-workers may be concerned that they will say the wrong thing, ask an inappropriate question, or unintentionally offend an applicant or colleague with a disability. Here are two resources with some excellent tips:

- Effective Interaction: Communicating With and About People with Disabilities in the Workplace www.dol.gov/odep/pubs/fact/effectiveinteraction.htm

- Disability Awareness Information Kit (an Australian publication)
  www.openroad.net.au/access/dakit/disaware/disawarecontent.htm

Accommodations. All employees need the right tools and work environment to effectively perform their jobs. “Reasonable accommodations” are modifications or adjustments to jobs, work environments, or workplace policies that enable qualified employees with disabilities to perform the fundamental duties of their jobs and have equal access to benefits available to employees without disabilities. The following resources can help you understand reasonable accommodations, which are often easier and less expensive to implement than commonly believed:

- Job Accommodation Network (JAN)
  AskJAN.org

  - Comprehensive List of JAN Publications

  - Searchable Online Accommodation Resource (SOAR)

STEP #4: Retaining Valued Employees

Finally, employers must take steps to keep their employees happy, healthy, and professionally fulfilled. The resources below address career development for people with disabilities, disability-related leave, and return-to-work issues.

Career Development. One of the main reasons workers leave their jobs is lack of career advancement opportunities. To learn how to ensure the inclusion of employees with disabilities in training and professional growth opportunities, read Career Development for People with Disabilities at www.dol.gov/odep/pubs/ek00/career.htm. ODEP also funded the inaugural UCLA Leadership Institute for Managers with Disabilities. For information on the Institute go to www.anderson.ucla.edu/EEPlimd.xml.
